Azouz, Rachid, Gache, Marie-Laure dir. Come on. THE questions that were put to me before I left England, as to the direction which I was about to take, and after I had returned as to the direction which I had taken, lead me to think that, even in these days of universal primers and travellers' guides, geographical information is not so widely diffused as to render superfluous a chapter explanatory of the different ways by What Would Audrey Do? Persia can be approached or left, and of the preparatory steps which require to be taken by a traveller.
